In former years fruitless Proclamations were issued by the Kirio and Monkden authorities prohibiting the cultivation of the poppy, but no such action has been taken in the Hulan district, no extra land tax is imposed, and no idea of illegality is entertained. AN INTERVIEW WITH GENERAL WONG YUNG HO.

The Adelaids Observer publishes the following report of an interview between a represent stive of that journal and General Wong Young

The Chinese Special Commissioners (General Wong Yung Ho and Consul-General U Tsing) arrived in Adelaide on Saturday morning (June 18th) from Melbourne, and were accorded a very hearty welcome. They are staying at the Imperial Hotel, and during Saturday I requested the honour of an interview with the General. An attendant ushered me into a drawing-room, and I had the good fortune to meet the Hon. J. L. Parsons (Government Resident of the Northern Territory), who at once kindly made me known to is Excellency. There were also present Consul-General U Tsing, Dr. G. On Lee, of Sydney, Mr. Way Lee, and several Chiness guests. The General appeared exceedingly pleased to meet Mr. Persons, whom he had travelled with from Hongkong to Sydney, and was eager to learn any fresh news the Government ordered in by the General, and the Chinese representing South Australia welcomed him to this colony. After Mr. Parsons had taken his departure I intimated to His Excellency that I had a few questions to ask him if he had no objections. He willingly agreed to answer them, and told me to make myself comfortable. None of the Chinese withdrew from the room. The General stated that he and his fellow Commissioner proposed leaving Adelaide again on Wednesday, June 23, as time would not permit of their stay being extended. They will visit Queensland before they depart from Australis, and they expect to reach their home in the course of two or three months. They had no instructions from the Emperor to come to Adelaide, but when they were half-way between China and Australia they thought they should like to see the Jublice Exhibition, and accordingly on arrival at Port Darwin they telegraphed to His Excellency the Governor to that effect. They have been accorded a place in the procession on Tuesday, and the Mayor has invited them to the ball in the evening. "What is the object of your visit to the colonies ?" was the first question asked. "We have come to look into the condition of our people; to see how they get along and how they behave themselves. We have also come with the object of obtaining information regarding the development of gold mining. We are desirons to open up the industry for ourselves in China. It has been proved beyond a doubt that gold exists in abundance in China, but we have not been in possession of sufficient information to enable us to secure it. We have elicited what we have desired, and we will be in a position to turn to use on our return if we desire to do so." "Anc, how have you found the Chinese in Australia ?" "They are very comfortable, and get on very well. They are quite as comfortable as we should like to see them. There may be some rowdies, and some of the low class, by Sir A. Colvin. but you must expect this. It is the same with all people, no matter of what nationality." "Do they behave themselves well !" "Yes, as far as I have been able to judge, they do. I found Missionaries, Chaplains, &c., in every part of the very few Chinese either at Pentridge or the world. Yesterday Mr. Alexander Robertson took unto himself a wife. His prize was Miss Amy Cubbins, formerly of your port. The marriage took place at Tientsin, first at the Consulate and afterwards by the Rev. Mr. Robinson. They left Tientsin in the Kontai which was gaily dressed with bunting, about 2 pm. Arriving here about 6 p.m. the marriage party were saluted with showers of rice and an abundance of fire-crackers. At about 8.30 p.m. thirty or forty sat down to a sumptuous dinner prepared at the Taku Hotel a large and commodious building lately erected. Many toasts were given and responded to, and the dinner passed off without a hitch. After dinner dancing was the order of the night. Although the weather was warm, many couples enjoyed themselves on the canvas covered floor. The bride looked charming. The residence of Mr. Wylie was robbed during the festivities of the marriage, his house being entered. Several things were recovered in the garden, but the thieves managed to get off clear with Mrs. Wylie's jewellery case. The Pilot Company will launch a new pilot

EXTRACT OF WHALE. Somebody, a Boston newspaper asserts, has tried eating whale's flesh, and has survived to tell a listening world all adout it.

The enormous cetacean has, it appears, been helied by those who declared that he ste belied by those who declared that he ate rank, and that he interfered with the digestive organs. Not only is a whale quite palatable enough for a hungry man to make a meal of, but it is further proclaimed that this new kind of animal food is highly nutritious. Ertract of whale is declared to be as nourishing as extract of beef, and, of course, it is more economical. It may be a little food supply in this happy and audacions discovery; but we may depend upon it that the collect sufferers to give it a trial to test its value.

THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS. early to rejoice at the opening out of a novel usual method adopted by whale-fishermen of disposing of the carcusses of these vast creatures, after they have been bauled close to the ship's side and their oil has been extracted, is exceedingly wasteful. There must THE LINCOLN AND MIDLAND COUNTIES DEUG be some better use to which a defunct cetacean could be put than setting him advift. once again to float about on the vasty deep. The amount of Drus Company, Lincoln, England. blubber that can be drawn from a good-sized T IEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF MEAT. sperm whale will be about twenty to thirty tons in weight. It is, however, a piece of shiftlessness or extravagance on the part of mankind to make no further use of their marine prize. To harpoon leviathan for his blubber, and that alone, is like shuightering buffaloes for their tongues, and leaving their carcasses to rot on the prairies. No doubt, if whales once became a common, or even a recognised, source of food, some other system would very speedily be adopted. The "whole animal" would have to be cut up as it lay rolling in the water; or it would be hauled by a powerful crane on board, and there the same process would be applied with greater ease of manipulation. Once let cetaceans be quoted in the meat or the fish market, and skippers will find out a method | 9, Francurce Avenue, London, England, [1149 of securing their vast bodies, carved into convenient lengths, on board ship until the return is made to a civilised port. It is car- renowned for nearly a century surpasses all others for its lasting and natural fragrance. tainly satisfactory that invention should thus keep pace with the appetite of the race, and that as the mouths requiring food increase the sources from which our daily bread and meut can be obtained should also become more numerous. Every fresh snimal that can be described as eatable is a blessing to the human family. Dietetic reformers should be encouraged to venture a little. further into this field than they have done ar present. They should try everything, and be as omnivorous as the lamented Frank Buckland. How else can we ever know what creatures are capable of being served up with satisfactory results at a dinnertable? If whiles he found to come under the category of victuals for man we might go a step further, and try porpoises, dolphins, and seals. The walrus and the sea-otter may possess unexpected potentialities of good food. It is impossible to may whether they do or not for certain, until some self-sacrificing humanitarien has cooked a walrus steak and eaten it for the benefit of his fellows. Here is a very practi cal region waiting for philanthropists; and it is one which may besides turn out to be worth cultivating for its pecuniary results alone. Take the hitherto neglected whale as an example. A single cetacean, it is calculated, will supply five hundred pounds of extract, and a pound of extract makes one bundred pints of nourishing soup. Thus it | TF you want JAPANESE GOODS at can easily be seen that one whale is capanie of satisfying the hunger of fifty thousand persons, if they were content to have a meal of whale-soup aloue. The cost of catching, curing, and conveying the meat back from the ocean where it was harvested to the place where it is to be eaten would be considerable; but then the whale is a gratuitous animal; nothing has to be paid for it to Neptune, beyond trouble. The blubber and whalebone that can be extracted from it will alone fetch four or five hundred pounds, and this would much more than pay for the cost | 1248] of capture and conveyance, leaving the fifty thousand pints of possible soup as so much additional profit on the transaction. Then let us attempt for a moment to estimate how many charitable dinners to the poor might LARGE STOCKS OF EVERY DESCRIPbe given out of all these pounds of extract Address :- Care of Messrs Kwong Sung & Co., An entire child's school might be fed out of a single whale for the whole winter. If we make the calculation in a different way, the extraordinary affluence of meat carried, without conceit, by these marine monsters, must appear even more amszing. An average whale converted into extract would suffice for when—as he might be expected to tire of too habit of attaining a ripe old age which le variously estimated by naturalists at between three and seven hundred years. Now a whale which was as old as either of these terms might be putritious, but the probabilities are that he would be tough. We should not therefore recommend whale as a man's exclusive food for the period of his natural existence. It should be judiciously varied human victualling department is to be rightwhale is a whole meat market in itself. It
